Rheumatism,

BEING due to the presence of uric acid in the blood, is most effectually cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Be sure you get Ayer's and no other, and take it till the poisonous acid is thoroughly expelled from the system. We challenge attention to this testimony:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months, and am pleased to state that it has effected a complete cure. I have since had no return of the disease."—Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th st., New York.

"One year ago I was taken ill with inflammatory rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."—Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H.

HIS LIFE WORK IS OVER

Ex-Speaker Samuel J. Randall Has Passed Away.

DEATH WON THE VICTORY AT LAST.

Surrounded by His Loved Ones, the Commoner Passed the Portal and Entered the Undiscovered Country—The Interesting Story of His Life.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Samuel Jackson Randall is dead. After a long and valiant battle with the death angel the great commoner peacefully breathed his last at 10:5 a. m., Sunday, April 13. Internal cancer was the malady that ended his career. He was surrounded by his family—his devoted wife and affectionate children, his daughters, Mrs. Lancaster and Susie Randall and his son Samuel—in his last moments. Mr. Randall came to Washington early in last November a sick man, but with hopes of improvement. He expected to be able to take his seat in the house when congress met in December. But when congress convened he was unable to leave his home. Subsequently the oath of office as a representative was administered at his residence by Speaker Reed, and Mr. Randall was made a member of the committee on rules and appropriations—the two important committees he had served on for so many years. Mr. Randall then hoped to be able to take his seat and participate actively in the affairs of the house at the conclusion of the holiday recess, but the dreaded and fatal malady from which he suffered slowly but surely made inroads on his strength, and each month as it passed found him weaker.

SAMUEL J. RANDALL.

He Was Slowly Failing.

Mr. Carlisle, his associate on the committee of rules, and Democratic members of the appropriations committee and other Democratic representatives called frequently at Mr. Randall's home to consult him about party matters and committee work. Some of them who called occasionally, but regularly, noticed that Mr. Randall was slowly failing physically, although mentally he was as acute and vigorous as ever; and for the past two months they felt that he would never leave his house alive. During the last few weeks of his life Mr. Randall suffered very much at times and he had become greatly emaciated. His devoted wife and children were untiring in all their attentions through his sickness, and his friends in congress (and he had a host of them of both political faiths) contributed much toward his comfort by frequent friendly visits.

HIS LATE HOME.

His Last Look of Love.

During his last hours his wife and family were constantly at his bedside. Mr. Randall was unconscious at times during the last day or two of his life, and was speechless toward the end. To Mrs. Randall he smiled a last fond look of recognition a half hour before his death.

The funeral will take place here on Thursday morning. The arrangements will be in charge of a congressional committee to be appointed today. Mrs. Randall prefers that the services be held in the Metropolitan Presbyterian church, of which Mr. Randall was a member, and not in the house of representatives. After the funeral services the funeral party will take a special train over the Pennsylvania railroad to Philadelphia, where the interment will take place in the Randall family vault in Laurel Hill cemetery.

The Story of His Life.

Samuel Jackson Randall was born in Philadelphia, Oct. 10, 1828, and his career through life justifies the assertion that he was born a statesman. He received a good academic education and pursued his studies with the intention of devoting his life to mercantile pursuits. After he had finished his studies he obtained a position in the counting room of a mercantile establishment, but in a short time his work became irksome and he conceived a distaste for the duties of a merchant. His father, the late Josiah Randall, was one of the active Democrats of Philadelphia, and he inspired his son with a desire to enter political life, which feeling increased in intensity as he attended conventions and meetings until he finally adopted it as the calling most suited to his taste. In 1856, accompanied by his father, he went to Cincinnati, and assisted at the convention that nominated Buchanan for president. Mr. Randall was elected a member of the city council of Philadelphia, which position he held for four years, familiarizing himself with city politics, and making for himself acquaintances and a record which were afterwards distined to push forward his political fortunes. In 1858 he was elected to the Pennsylvania state senate, of which he soon became the most conspicuous member.

A Defender of the Union.

When the civil war broke out, he took strong grounds in favor of the maintenance of the Union, and while he differed with the administration on many point of method, he was one of the most steadfast supporters of an undivided country to the end. He was at that time a member of the First troop, Philadelphia City cavalry, and volunteered with his command under President Lincoln's call for troops and served the ninety days. In 1862 he was elected to congress from the Third Pennsylvania district and has been re-elected to each succeeding session, serving continuously since that time. In 1875, when the Democrats gained control of the house for the first time since 1861 his friends tried hard to have him elected speaker, knowing that he possessed the qualities so essentially fit for the position. The party caucus, however, decided against him and a favor of Michael C. Kerr, of Indiana.

The Tilden-Hayes Controversy.

Then came what was probably the most delicate and trying period of Mr. Randall's political career. In 1876 he was elected speaker—at a time when the dispute about the Tilden-Hayes presidential election excited congress to a condition bordering on fury and almost brought the country to the verge of another civil war. Suspicion was so keen that ordinary parliamentary courtesy to a political opponent was the cause of severe party criticism, and for the last month of the session the speaker had to exert all his ability and strain to the utmost his influence with his party to steer the ship of state safely. Through that exciting ordeal he passed with pronounced success, expediting in a marked degree the settlement of the vexed question which agitated the country.

He was re-elected speaker for the two following terms, serving in that position until March 3, 1881, when the Republicans took the house for a term. When the Democrats again obtained control of the house the divisions in that party on the revenue issues led to his defeat for the speakership and to the election of John G. Carlisle. But Mr. Randall always retained the commanding position his talents had won for him and grew in reputation. As speaker he was not tender in the administration of his office. He was a commander and ruled the house with a heavy hand. From the first Mr. Randall was recognized in congress as a power, and finally he became the recognized leader of his party.

His High Tariff Attitude.

He served in turn on all the important committees—the committee on rules, on banking, on elections and on appropriations, of which latter committee he was the chairman and dominating spirit when his party was in power. For the past few years the stand which Mr. Randall had assumed on the tariff question gradually alienated him from the majority of his party, both state and national; and although no man impeached his fidelity or sincerity to the principles of democracy, this separation from his associates had undoubtedly greatly weighed upon his mind, and added to the other drains upon his physical system. In appearance Mr. Randall was what might be called a peculiar man. His countenance was rather boyish, but singularly winning and attractive. His feet and hands were small and shapely, but in his way of drawing up his left shoulder that made one of his arms appear longer than the other. In walking he stepped out briskly, with shoulders a little stooped, and a gait that was rather shambling. But though his ensemble was striking, his dress added to the oddity of his appearance. For more than twenty-five years he wore the same style of clothing, and no one ever seemed to have seen him in a new suit of clothes. A cutaway coat thrown loosely back, baggy trousers a trifle bunchy at the knees, and a low cut vest, all with a tinge of age about them; immaculate linen, broad comfortable shoes, and a remarkable hat completed his attire.

He Died a Poor Man.

Mr. Randall was a poor man. He was twenty-eight years a member of the house yet no one has ever been found to reflect even in the slightest degree upon his integrity or honesty. He was probably poorer in purse when he died than when he came to Washington away back in the Thirty-eighth congress. He owned the modest residence in which he lived on Capitol hill. It is situated on C street and is not worth more than $5,000. The modest dwelling represents the savings of nearly half a life time. He made very little money outside of his salary, and, indeed, had very little time to spare from his public duties.

Proof Against the Lobby's Temptations.

The stories gleaned from the lobby as to unsuccessful attempts upon his virtue as a legislator are only unparalleled by the stories told by his friends as to the unyielding front which he always presented to the petition of friendship when it ran counter to his sense of public duty. A lawyer who was his bosom friend tells that he called upon $10,000 in his pockets for months, having undertaken to give it to Randall as a retainer in behalf of a certain corporation, but could never muster the courage to give it to him or even broach the subject. On one occasion a wealthy blanket manufacturer, knowing that Randall was a poor man, and having a profound admiration for him, sent him a check for $500 saying that as an old friend and constituent he believed it his duty and privilege to make this subscription to help pay his election expenses. The check was promptly returned with a letter so curt that it would have mortally offended any one who did not make allowance for Randall's infirmity of temper in this respect. When asked once if he did not carry his independence or indifference in such matters to an extreme, he replied: "No, there is no middle ground in such matters. I draw the line at the beginning." His comparative poverty is a monument to his sterling integrity.

Mr. Randall scorned a public man who appointed any of his own relatives to office. His brother wanted a European consulship, and he could have secured it for him, for he was close to the administration at the time. But Mr. Randall sturdily refused and did the same thing with other relatives. At the same time no man was more loyal to his friends than he.

His Remarkable Reticence.

One of Mr. Randall's peculiarities was his remarkable reticence about himself and his affairs. About twelve years ago, when his name first began to be prominently mentioned in connection with the presidential nomination of the Democratic party, a well known newspaper correspondent who wanted to compile his biography was surprised to find no published data available. He sought Mr. Randall and asked him for some of the details of his early life, telling him the purpose for which he desire them. Mr. Randall told him, in his blunt way, that he would find all that was worth knowing about him in the congressional directory.

The correspondent consulted that repository of the autobiographies of statesmen and was surprised to find that while the records of congressmen hardly known outside of their own district contained between 500 and 600 words, less than 100 were employed to chronicle the record of the man who was the leader of the house. As another instance of his reticence, it is related that just after the famous Oak View conference, where President Cleveland outlined his message to Mr. Randall, a personal friend asked him what he had heard about it. "I did hear," was Mr. Randall's laconic reply, "that they got as far as free whisky." To Mrs. Randall he was singularly devoted.

In July, 1888, Mr. Randall was suddenly taken seriously ill in Washington with hemorrhage of the stomach. During the previous three months he had undergone several very severe and trying surgical operations in Philadelphia, which greatly impaired his constitution. The hemorrhage developed into inflammation of the bowels and his condition rapidly grew worse. He never fully recovered from this attack.

By the death of Representative Kelley Mr. Randall was entitled to succeed him as the "father of the house" by reason of longest continuous service. It may be said of him that he died in the harness—a public man absolutely without a stain.

Fatally Shot in the Mouth.

NEW YORK, April 16.—Frank Witte resides at 355 East Tenth street with his wife, Philip Conger formerly boarded with Witte, but the latter became jealous of Conger's attentions to his wife and put him out of the house three or four days ago. Conger returned to Witte's house and fatally shot him in the mouth. Conger was arrested.

A Count of No Account.

PHILADELPHIA, April 14.—Giuseppe Carusi, known as the Count Di Montercole, was rearrested immediately upon his release from prison Saturday. The charge upon which the second arrest was made was criminal libel, made against him by Frederick Bausman on behalf of his niece, Virginia Knox, the count's wife. The latter was not present, she being confined to her bed suffering from prostration, caused by the slanderous attacks made upon her character contained in a circular distributed about the streets of Philadelphia by the count. Mrs. Josephine Knox, the mother of the count's wife, appeared as a witness against the prisoner. She testified that the charges contained in the circular against her daughter were absolutely false; that her daughter had seen the defendant distribute the circulars in the streets of Philadelphia, and that he had harassed and oppressed her slandered offspring until she was in bodily fear of him. Mrs. Knox was very much moved while denying the charges of infidelity and gross immorality made against her daughter by the count. The prisoner was committed to jail in default of $2,000 bail.

The New York Sun says that ex-President Cleveland has become alarmed at his rapidly increasing weight and has placed himself under the care of a practitioner of the Schweninger system of fat reduction, from whom he is to receive daily treatment until his flesh is reduced. It is said that one feature of the treatment in the ex-president's case will be daily exercise in a sort of treadmill, or "mountain climber," invented by Dr. Schweninger.

Brief Mention of Matters Which Everybody Should Know About—A Week's Accidents and Crimes Accurately and Concisely Chronicled.

WEST ELIZABETH, Pa., April 10.—Two children of George Beattie, aged 7 years, were drowned here while going to school. They were crossing a swollen stream on a foot log. The little girl fell in and was swept down with the current. Her twin brother jumped in to rescue her and had almost succeeded when his strength failed and both were drowned.

PHILADELPHIA, April 10.—A dispatch from Doylestown says that James Monroe Shellenberger, a member of the state board of charities, and one of the best known men in that borough, has left for parts unknown and is charged with being short in his accounts fully $30,000. He left the town, so it is said, last Sunday afternoon, and was last heard from at Atlantic City. Mr. Shellenberger was a Democrat in politics and served one term as district attorney of the courts. He was chairman of the county Democratic standing committee. The cause of his alleged defalcation is extravagant living. An effort will be made to settle with his creditors. The alleged misappropriated cash is said to have come mainly from estates of which he had charge. His property is said to be entirely in his deceased wife's name.

United After Many Years.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., April 12.—A remarkable case of the reunion of mother and child after forty years of hopeless separation has just occurred here. Mrs. Sadie Krechebaum, who was stolen from her home when she was 5 years old, has returned to her mother's arms, but she is now a woman of 45 and the mother of several children. Mrs. Krechebaum is the daughter of John Gilbert, of Northumberland, Pa., whose nearest neighbor was John Malthius, a childless farmer. In 1850 Malthius moved to Indiana, at which time he kidnaped the 5-year-old girl. Gilbert spent his fortune in the search for his child and died broken hearted. His wife married again. The little girl grew up in absolute ignorance of her parentage until it was revealed to her a few months ago, upon the death of her abductor. CANDIDATES.

The following is a list of candidates for County offices to be voted for at the delegate election held Saturday August 9, 1890, between the hours of 2 and 7 o'clock p. m. Nominating convention Tuesday August 12th.

FOR PROTHONOTARY & CLERK OF THE COURTS.

J. H. MAIZE,
of Bloomsburg, Pa.

G. M. QUICK,
of Bloomsburg, Pa.

In pursuance of a request of the State Department the following statistics in regard to Columbia County, which will interest many readers, were gathered by Deputy Wm. Bidleman, of the Patrons of Husbandry, assisted by Mr. J. D. Bodine and Matthew Quick. The acreage of cleared land is 17,793. Mineral land, Forest and Quarries 106,796. Total 284,726. Number of farms over 10 acres, and not over 50 acres, 1,502. Over 50 and not over 100 acres, 1,253. Over 100 and not over 200 acres, 550 Over 200 acres, 47. Total number of farms 33,520 out of this number 462 are farmed by tenants. Forty nine farmers have failed in the last ten years. About one-fourth of the County is level, bottom land and productive: the balance is hilly and a good portion mountainous. There are 140 miles of Railroad [not counting sidings and switches] in the County. There is owned by land companies, 18,530 acres, all mountainous and mineral. The decline in the value of farm lands in the County is owing to the low price of wheat and other products. There is an increase of farm products as compared with the population; especially in grains, but the price of these as a whole has decreased more than one-fourth. Other products very little. In 1879 Wheat was $1.25, Rye 60c, Corn 50c and Oats 33c.

To The Farmers.

The American farmers, too poor to indulge in anything better than the miseries of retrospection, must awake to the realization of the fact that, in a great measure, they are themselves responsible for the many evils which afflict them

Time was when the farmer was the most honored and most independent of men; when his land belonged to him and not to the money lenders; when the products of his labor did not go to pay the interest on a mortgage; when his whole life, though one of toil, was sweetened with the reflection that when old age would come and quick-stalking activity give place to infirmity seated in a rocking chair, that his children would inherit the fruits of his many years of labor and he, at last, would go down to his final resting place indebted to none but his Crestor. He had a will, too, in the halls of congress and on the judicial bench, statesmen acknowledged his worth and poets saw rhythm in the movements of his flocks, and melody in the sounds of the reapers. In a word, the farmer was nature's sovereign prince on earth, who, had he more carefully scanned the significance party of politics and the motives which actuate the mere politician devoid of statesmanlike qualities, would never have fallen from his proud eminence to what he is to-day.

But fallen he is; and that most abjectly, when the meanest political trickster can cozen him with a hope of prosperity based upon increased taxation on all which enters into the daily requirements of life. Swindled of nearly all his possessions by class legislation in the interest of mine owners, manufacturers and transporters, he is promised no repeal of this legislation but at the last hour he is to be made an honorary member in this society of swindling knaves, by a tax upon farm products. Instead of a repeal of the tax on agricultural machinery, he is to be rewarded by a tax on eggs, butter and potatoes. Instead of a repeal of the tax on salt, binding twine, coal, lumber, wire and four thousand articles not of his producing, he is to be recompensed by an extra tax on wheat, corn and barley. This is all that is promised the farmer: it is all that monopolists will concede because of their reliance upon the stupidity and party zeal of the great mass who compose the agricultural class. And is this to satisfy the farmer? Is he to become dishonored, too, by joining the ranks of those who in their game of snap-the- whip with the tax-ridden people, will add him to the end of the line to fling him sprawling when the column rushes and turns upon the consumers? Who is it needs protection? Is it the farmer? Yes; but not from other farmers; for they can work him no injury; being, like himself, incapable of monopolizing the products of the farm or the markets whereto they go. Does the farmer need protection? Yes; from the greed of the mine owners, the manufacturers, the transporters and the cattle kings. Can he obtain protection by a law to tax farm products, and, if so, how? Is he not told by the very men who propose to tax farm products that he has been producing too much, and that to obtain higher prices he must produce less? Do not the official statistics of the treasury department show that instead of there being any foreign importations of the farm products, the American farmer is selling five hundred million dollars' worth of his product every year in Europe? Can the farmer restrict production for the purpose of enhancing prices? Should he plant but half the amount of seed he planted last year can he assure himself of half a crop? or do the atmospheric condition, destroying insects and unknown causes over which he has no control, rightly influence him to husband every acre of his land? All history proves that the farmer dares not attempt to restrict production, unless he would blindly and foolishly court disaster. The mine owner, the manufacturer and the transporter can and do regulate much of their business to the wants and circumstances of the time, for which reason taxes and discrimination against their competition in business give them that monopoly in the home market which they now promise to share with the farmer whose every environment debars him from ever becoming anything better than a loser in the partnership proposed.

It is to be hoped the farmers will think seriously, not alone of their condition, but of the condition of the people as a whole, and rise in their wrath and compel the repeal of the infamous tariff tax laws.—Patriot.

WHAT IS

SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofulous sore neck from the time she was 22 months old till she became six years of age. Lumps formed in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she seems to be a healthy child." J. S. CARLILE, Nauright, N. J.

This Remedy is the prescription of one of the leading physicians of Paris, France, and was used by him with unparalleled success for over thirty years, it was first given to the public as a proprietary medicine in 1878. Since which time it has found its way into almost every county on the face of the globe, and become a favorite remedy with thousands of the leading physicians. Medical societies have discussed its marvelous success at their annual conventions, and after their official chemists have analyzed it and found that it contained no opiates, bromides or other harmful ingredients placed it among their standard remedies.

On Friday morning last about 9 o'clock the new bell on the Town Hall began to ring rapidly, and it was soon learned that it was a fire alarm. George Lockard's barn on the rear of his premises was found to be enveloped in flames. All the hose carriages were soon on the ground, the Friendship being first, and two streams of water soon extinguished the fire, but not until the barn was destroyed. The fire had gotten under strong headway before it was discovered. A cow and horse were removed from the barn without injury. The origin of the fire is unknown. T. M. Dawson who was at work plastering in the Town Hall was the person who sounded the first fire alarm on the bell in the tower.

Coleman built a fire in the cook stove, and the pipe having become disjointed in the second story, the roof caught fire, and was in a blaze when discovered by persons at the Desk Factory. Superintendent Schoch ordered out the force in the shops, and in a very short time a stream was thrown upon the fire and the flames extinguished. The goods in the house were damaged by water.

A Bogus Newspaper Agent in Limbo.

The fraud is caught in Carbon county and will probably serve out a long sentence in the Penitentiary. He may be the same fraud that was victimizing farmers in Falls and Overfield townships, this county, a few months ago, claiming to be agent for the Democrat. He was afterwards operating in Luzerne county in the same business. He is described by the Mauch Chunk Times as giving his name as Charles Johnson and he said his home was in Connecticut. He appears from 25 to 30 years of age, is of medium weight and build, about five feet seven inches tall. His face is adorned with a mustache, stubby in appearance, otherwise shaved clean. His countenance is intelligent in expression but bears the marks of dissolute habits, the chin being somewhat red and a well formed nose somewhat colored red. The suit of clothes on his person was considerably worn, but evidently had not passed through manual labor." The Times says it is the intention of the newspaper publishers of Carbon to see to it that indictments are piled so thick upon the chap that he will never trouble anybody again for some time to come.—Ex.

This is probably the same man who collected money in this county, representing himself as an agent for different newspapers. The description is very much like him.

Prof. J. P. Welsh.

On Thursday night last week, the Board of Trustees of the Normal School elected Prof. J. P. Welsh to succeed Dr. D. J. Waller as Principal of the school. Prof. Welsh is a son of Abner Welsh of Orangeville. He graduated at the Normal in the class of 1876, and then went to Lafayette College where he graduated in 1880. For several years he has filled the English chair at Westchester Normal School, one of the largest in the state. He has been Assistant Principal of that school for the past three years, and has had offers from colleges to take a professorship with them. He is a public lecturer and institute worker, and is also the author of an English grammar that is being widely adopted. His wife is a lady of education and culture, and she too is an institute worker, and a very pleasing elocutionist. They were both in attendance at the last Teacher's Institute, and became very popular with the teachers. Mr. Welsh was selected from among fifteen applicants for the position. Applications were received from Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Ohio, North Dakota, South Dakota, and other states. The testimonials of each were of the highest character, and it is no reflection on any of them that they were not selected. It was a case where a choice had to be made, and under all the circumstances Mr. Welsh was considered the most eligible man for the place. His election was unanimous. It is probable that he will spend some time at the school during the present term, in order to become acquainted with the details of the work before Dr. Waller leaves. The new principal will no doubt have the hearty co-operation of the community in holding the school up to its present high standard.

OUR NEW INDUSTRIES.

THE BLOOMSBURG CARPET MILL.

In 1885 it became evident to the leading business men and most enterprising citizens of Bloomsburg that our town required some new impetus to get it out of the old ruts and to set the wheels of trade in motion. Other places were holding out inducements to foreign capital to locate factories in their midst, and thus furnish employment for a large number of working people. As nothing could be accomplished without organization, a Board of Trade was formed, largely through the efforts of our late lamented townsman, David Lowenberg, who was elected President of the Board. Numerous committees were appointed, and vigorous steps were at once taken to induce manufacturers to locate here. Many letters of inquiry were received, thus showing early fruits of the new organization, but much of this correspondency amounted to nothing, as it was found that many of those who proposed to locate here were willing to do so, provided our people would accede to most unreasonable demands. They wanted the whole earth, but were willing to compromise by a gift of the whole town. All such were dropped without ceremony.

Among those who made reasonable propositions was James Magee of Philadelphia, and the negotiations with him resulted in the conclusion that money should be raised for the erection of a large carpet factory. The proposition was that the land should be purchased, and buildings erected, which when completed would be taken by Magee & Co., and the subscribers secured by mortgage and bonds. It was largely through the efforts of L. N. Moyer that Magee & Co., were induced to come here.

About $40,000 was subscribed for the erection of the plant, and a building committee representing the subscribers consisting of C. W. Miller, C. C. Peacock, H. V. White, I. S. Kuhn and L. N. Moyer was appointed, who entered at once upon their work. A lot was purchased of William Neal near the fair grounds, a contract made with David Hensinger for the buildings, and the work was completed a few weeks ago. There is one large brick building, four stories high, also an engine and boiler house, and a dye and dry house. These buildings are separate and connected by bridges. The firm of Magee & Co. consists of James Magee, W. H. Vanrhenen, and James Magee, all from Philadelphia, where they have been making carpets for many years.

On the first floor of the main building are the business offices, large and handsomely finished in hard wood. There are also sample, finishing and shipping rooms. On the second floor are 28 Knowles improved looms, all set up and ready for work, nineteen more will be put in. A machine at the top of each loom, known as the Jacquard, regulates the design of the carpet. On the third floor are the cop frames, and winding machines. The entire building is heated by exhaust steam from the engine, which is utilized through a Berryman heater. Water pipes are placed all through, and a complete system of fire protection will be adopted.

There is a large dyeing room, drying rooms, sulphur rooms for bleaching, and a toilet room for female employees. It is probable that in course of time a library will be established for the use of all employees.

There are two elevators run by Morse & Williams' steam elevator machines. The engine was made by Green, of Providence R. I. and is run by two 100 horse power boilers. The fly wheel is 12 feet in diameter and makes 100 revolutions a minute. The belt connecting with the shafting is 3 ply leather, 20 inches wide and 78 feet long. In the engine room is a Blake pump for fire purposes. The boilers were made by Charles W. Ervies & Co., Philadelphia. Mark Boyton is the engineer in charge. All persons employed at the Carpet Mill will be taken from the town, except a loom fixer and warper who must be skilled workmen. About 100 hands will be employed as soon as everything is put in working order. The capacity of the mill is about 4000 rolls a year, with 120 to 130 yards to the roll.

It is the custom in many mills to charge beginners $10 for teaching them to operate a loom, but this will not be done now. Learners will be expected to work the first two weeks without pay, and after that they will receive three cents a yard.

The first carpet made at the mill was on March 30, and several yards were woven the first two hours, which is quite an unusual thing for new looms. Magee & Co. are wide awake business men, and their coming to our town will no doubt prove mutually beneficial

MIDGLEY & HALEX.

The basement of the Carpet Mill is occupied by Holmes Midgley and James Haley, who have put in a large number of machines for making yarns. They have been in business many years and are practical men. They come here from Montgomery N. Y. Their machinery is such that they will be prepared to make yarns not only for the use of the Carpet Mill, but also for all kinds of knitting purposes, coatings, ladies' dress goods, and in fact for any purpose for which worsted yarns are used. This opens up an important industry here, as it creates a supply for any kind of weaving establishment that may locate here, and offers a rare inducement for such industries to come to Bloomsburg. Messrs. Midgley & Haley will employ at least fifty hands, all of whom will be selected from the town. They will be ready to begin work about May 1st.

It is the coming of such industries and of such men into our community that has brought Bloomsburg largely into notice in the outside business world, and that promise for her a most prosperous future.

WANAMAKER'S.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, April 14, 1890.

Brandenburg Cloth! Why Brandenburg? No reason why save that the Brandenburg arms make a brilliant trade-mark and Brandenburg is a great, strong name.

The cloth is cotton. Such cotton! Shades of Moses on the Nile! did you ever see better? Egypt or South Carolina cotton we know not which, nor care we, so strong, so close the thread. You might almost call it linen, the yarns are so clean and smooth. The printing is exquisite. Who dares to challenge the imagination of Philadelphia when such Cotton Dress Goods printing is done almost within sound of our city church bells?

Just this one stuff was needed to make what already was the greatest Dress Goods Stock in all the world more complete with an added, almost superfluous, completeness.

Examine the goods. The colors fairly sparkle, and you think at once of France and China, of Foulards and Shanghais. Comparisons are odious or otherwise, according to the point of view. But a comparison of this with any fairly competing cloth must be odious—for the other cloth.

The width is 30 inches full, the price 20 cents. Compare the count of threads, this shows 20 per cent finer; compare the strength, this gives 30 per cent more strength; compare colors and design—there is no comparison, the Brandenburg is beyond and above it. Sheer as a batiste, solid as a drill, light as a zephyr, strong almost as leather. The Brandenburg fills a royal place in cottons and is born to rule.

Crepeline is going. 5000 yards a day. Why shouldn't it? Crepeline would be foolish to stay here when it can get out at 6¼ cents a yard. The buyers win and laugh as winers always do. The maker loses—poor fellow, he doesn't laugh.

An humble but late arrival—the latest. Wool check dress goods, 37 inches wide, at 15 cents a yard. We told you once they were cheap at 25 cents and told the literal truth. You believed and bought them freely. Got another lot to sell you as above. Not all wool, but too much for the money. Another maker weeps, but you laugh again.

No matter what wear use you want to put stuff to—dress parade or banging about—just the right quality and style and price is here ready to your hand. Haphazard.

Jacquard Figured Robes, three designs, and good line of Colors in each, $12; imported to sell at $22.
Mohair in plain and glace effects, great variety of colors, 50c, 75c, $1.
50-inch All-wool Sun'h Twill, in nineteen colors, all new shades, handsome and serviceable, $1
6-4 Waterroof Dundee Plaids, in large and small designs, specially suited for ladies' wraps and children's jackets, $1. A few days since they were $150.
40-inch All-wool Indistinct Stripes with dashes of bourette through them; a light weight faborib for Spring and Summer, 75c from $1.
At the Black counter is a Black Nun's Veiling and a Silk Batiste, both 36 inches wide, all-wool and light weight, 37½c, imported this season to sell for 50c.
All-wool Serge with mohair border, 42 inches wide, $1.

The wonderful Crêpe Neckwear is in full bloom at both ends of the store. And such prices! 50c stands for $1 and $1.25.

Of course you can get Crêpe Neckwear in two or three places in town at 50c, but there are Crêpes and Crêpes. These are the extra ones: extra cloth, extra embroidery, and extra made.

The Underwear wonder is how so much muslin and stitching and trimming can be had for so little money:

Drawers made of Fruit of Loom Muslin, with hem and 3 plaits, 25c.
Very heavy and fine Muslin Drawers, with neat Hamburg ruffle, and 14 plaits, 50c. By far the best 50c Drawers we ever offered.
Heavy Muslin Gown, with yoke of allover embroidery and plaits, neatly trimmed with Hamburg edge, 87c.

That's the way the story runs through every chapter.

Scrofula and Salt Rheum

The heritage of which every human being is almost as certain as he is of air, sunlight and breath, is Scrofula Humor. Far away in the realms of history we catch glimpses of what a curse upon the people this all-prevalent contamination made itself. Poor diet and insufficient food, ill ventilation, filth and dampness, all assist the slumbering germs of Scrofula to overpower the vitality of the body and run riot in the system. The blood in its process of renewing the waste cannot expel any inherited taint of weakness or impurity. It can only be removed by the action of some purifying medicinal agency, which assisted by nutritious food, well digested and assimilated into blood, gradually insures the possession of sound health. Such a renovating remedy has Brown's Sarsaparilla proved itself to be, whether this taint has given rise to Scrofula, Salt Rheum Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Liver Complaints, or Kidney Diseases, which are the most frequent manifestations of its presence, all have readily yielded to the clean and purifying action of Brown's Sarsaparilla.

A VERY BAD CASE

of Scrofula, cured by Brown's Sarsaparilla, has excited the people living in and around the town of Lee, Me. Mr. Averill writes us as follows: "My son has now taken fourteen bottles of Brown's Sarsaparilla, and I am sure it has completed a cure. His case was the worst I ever saw. His face was covered with what seemed to be scales or scabs, and the itching was so intolerable that he tossed about in agony through many a sleepless night. He commenced some weeks ago to use Brown's Sarsaparilla in connection with the salve you sent to allay the irritation, and now he is so far recovered that we consider his complete cure as certain." Mr. J. W. Burke of Lee, chairman of Penobscot Co. Commissioners, says: "It is wonderful what Brown's Sarsaparilla has done for young Averill." In this case Brown's Sarsaparilla threw open the bowels and pores of the skin, at the same time entering the blood, beginning a vigorous warfare on the impure matter found there, and which was a constant source of supply for the scrofulous humor on the outside. In time this was expelled from the system, and only pure matter entered the blood.

Cured by the Use of

SALT RHEUM.

On Davis Street, in Bangor, resides Mrs. Edwin Wiley, whose daughter was badly afflicted with Salt Rheum. At times her face and hands would be covered with blotches. So intense was the itching sensation that applications of salt were made to destroy it. For a long time no relief could be obtained. One day some one suggested Brown's Sarsaparilla, and a bottle was purchased. Later Mrs. Wiley brought her daughter to the establishment of Mr. Ara Warren whose Brown's Sarsaparilla is made. The face that a short time previous was covered with blotches, burning and itching, presented as fair and smooth an appearance as that of any young lady. LESS THAN ONE BOTTLE WAS USED.

MAKE SURROUNDINGS ATTRACTIVE.

The Money Value of Rural Improvements Considered.

A recent number of Garden and Forest contains a thoughtful essay on the actual money to be made by improving country roads and making village and farm surroundings attractive. The writer says:

One of the strongest considerations in favor of preserving the forests in mountain regions like that of New Hampshire is that they offer irresistible inducement to people in the city who are looking for summer resorts. Many people have come to consider a summer residence among the hills as essential to their comfort as a winter home in the city, and the growing practice among those who cannot afford to support more than one establishment of spending some weeks or months away from the confinement of city life, makes it a matter of importance that provision should be made for those who find health and pleasure in the woods and amid the scenery of wild nature.

It would be hard to estimate the direct pecuniary advantage which a state like New Hampshire derives from this tide of summer travel which flows towards her mountains all summer long. Every one of these visitors, in some way or other, helps the entire community upon which he depends for a certain time each year for his pleasure and subsistence; and it would not be difficult to prove that the actual and prospective revenue derived from this source is so important that the value of the material products of the forests of the state, even under the wisest management, would be insignificant by comparison.

But it should not be forgotten that there are thousands of people from the cities who, instead of resorting to mountain and forest regions, or to the shores of the ocean, prefer to spend their summers in quiet country villages and farm houses. Of course it is quite as much to the interest of rural communities to make their neighborhood attractive as it is for the owners of sea coast and mountain land. It is true that this should not be considered as the chief reason for efforts to improve the appearance and add to the convenience and comfort of country towns. Societies for rural improvement accomplish a good work when they brighten in any way what is often the dull side of country life.

Every attempt to beautify the surroundings of country homes and make them attractive brings its own reward in the happier life of those who inhabit these homes. But apart from this there is a tangible business advantage to be gained by country villages when they are made specially attractive to city visitors; and this profit accrues not to the village alone, but to all the surrounding region, when the farm houses are open to paying occupation and a market is provided for the products of the farm. It happens in this way that to the population of a large district it is a matter of actual profit to have the neighboring villages and towns made attractive.

The first work in this direction is to improve the roads so that there is some pleasure, or at least some comfort, in traveling abroad. A visitor who reaches a village over a muddy and rough highway receives no good impression of it, and as the road is also the last thing as well as the first thing which attracts his attention, bad roads are among the most repellant and disagreeable features which any community can present. But where the roads are smooth and hard, with little dust and mud, and where good footpaths abound, a strong inducement is presented to those who love to pass much time in the open air.

Of course this is but one feature of the reform in any community. Shady walks, roadsides clean and bordered with shrubs, where this is practicable; farmyards free from unsightly objects, gardens neatly planted and kept—all these things not only delight the eye, as manifestations of beauty and order always do, but they suggest a cleanliness and propriety in all the details of life, and a proper regard for health and comfort; they give assurance of good drainage and pure air, and all other conditions which make a sojourn in the country desirable and beneficial.

Now, inasmuch as all the inhabitants of a given district are interested in matters of this sort, combined action is naturally suggested. The influence of personal example is undoubtedly great, and many a man, by the proper ordering of his own grounds, has set a pattern which has been followed by his neighbors until an entire community has been regenerated. But, after all, these matters can be much more efficiently carried on if it is done in an organized way. Many a town in New England and in the middle states has become prosperous because wealthy men from distant cities have bought lands near by, which have been transformed into beautiful parks, stocked with well bred cattle and horses.

All this was brought about because in the beginning there was unity of purpose in the community to make the town attractive, and transient guests were induced to become permanent residents. Examples like this should be an encouragement to all country neighborhoods, and especially to such as have some natural advantages. There will be no abandoned farms in a region where there is associated effort for rural improvement. Such effort cannot fail, in any event, to add to the comfort and pleasures of rural life, and it is more than probable that it will insure a more substantial return in actual revenue than any other equal outlay in whatever direction it is invested.

A new tire ordinance went into effect in St. Louis Jan. 1. It provides for a double tax to be levied on all vehicles that do not have tires of specified width. The width of tire is to be proportioned to the size of the axle. A steel or iron axle one and one-quarter inches must have tire at least one and one-eighth inches wide, and so up to four inch axle, which requires five inch tire. A like set of specifications are given for wooden axles. Vehicles with axles less than one and one-quarter inches are not subject to the ordinance.

The Judge's Time Was Precious.

A Southwest Georgia justice of the peace had listened to the evidence in a case that was being tried before him, and when that had concluded one of the lawyers arose to make a speech in favor of his client.

The Judge listened patiently for half an hour, and then began writing on a piece of paper in front of him. A few minutes later he interrupted the lawyer by saying:

"Gentlemen, when you finish your speeches you will find my decision written on this piece of paper. You will have to excuse me for a while, as I have to plant some potato slips. Let me know when you have concluded, and I will return and sentence the prisoner."

It is unnecessary to mention the fact that another young lawyer had his finest effort cut short.

The Value of Pure Wine in Sickness.

The chief difficulty with reliable wines has been their scarcity and richness in body, but this has been removed by the introduction of a pure nature wine, produced by Mr. A. Speer of New Jersey. He has submitted his wine to the test of many celebrated physicians and chemists, and all concur in its purity, rich medical properties and superiority to all Port Wines. Most of them prescribe it in cases of debility, affections of the kidneys and chronic complaints, requiring a tonic, sudorific or diuretic treatment.—Examiner

Prohibition in Iowa

ASSISTANT POSTMASTER GENERAL CLARKSON WANTS THE LAW MODIFIED.

First Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson, in an interview lately, spoke of the causes that led to the holding of the late State Convention of Iowa Republicans opposed to the continuance of the prohibition law. Mr. Clarkson admitted freely that the convention was composed of influential Republicans, headed by Ex-Governor and Ex-Secretary of the Interior Kirkwood.

Iowa, Mr. Clarkson said, has always been a strong temperance State. In the fifties the Democrats, when in control, enacted a law prohibiting the sale of liquors, wines and beers. The Republicans, about the beginning of the civil war, under the influences of German immigration, modified the law so as to permit the sale of ale, wine and beer. Temperance agitation continued until it grew strong enough to demand prohibition in the form of a constitutional amendment. This was carried June 27, 1882, by 3,000 majority, but the Supreme Court declared the amendment invalid on technical grounds.

The temperance people then demanded the enactment of a prohibitory law by the Republican party, which was complied with. This has been on trial for seven years. Though Mr. Clarkson supported the constitutional amendment and also the prohibitory law, he feels that while it has proved admirable for the agricultural towns and smaller towns, it has failed to find the necessary public opinion to enforce it in the larger cities and in the counties along the Mississippi river.

The Republican party has never been united in its support, as many as fifty to sixty thousand being opposed to it though they have gone along with the party willing to see the experiment tried. Now that it has partially failed, they insist that the law shall be amended so as to give prohibition to the 80 per cent. of Iowa where public opinion favors and enforces it, but that some other methods of regulating and repressing the traffic should be given to the 20 per cent. of the State where experience shows that it never can be enforced.

"My own judgment," concluded Mr. Clarkson, "is that some such modification should be made. Of course, it would cause some injury to the party, but it is pretty plain that greater injury will be caused to the party if it is not done. Besides, if it is right, it ought to be done on that account. The demand of this convention for a silent platform will not be successful. It is not the temper of Iowa people to be silent on any question. The present Legislature should, in my judgment, modify the law, as demanded by the experience of actual trial."

"My blood had been so out of order during the summer of 1888 that I virtually had no health at all. I had no appetite; nothing I ate agreed with me. I was feeble, puny, and always feeling bad. I had tried various remedies without receiving any benefit, until at length I commenced on Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) Musical Wolves.

A PLAINSMAN TELLS A FUNNY STORY OF A VENTURESOME TENDERFOOT.

Still further proof of the superior character of the wolf is found, according to Mr. Munford, in his musical taste. He says that once upon a time a tenderfoot came to his cabin in February and engaged his help in securing a number of wolf pelts. As the easiest way to accomplish this Mr. Munford anointed the man's heels with asafetida and sent him off up a gorge where wolves were known to be. Wolves will always follow such a trail. The man was to go to a tree previously pointed out and climb into the branches and from that perch shoot as many wolves as he liked, for it was certain that the wolves in smelling the drug would make haste to come to him. The pelt gatherer started off as directed, but very much sooner than he expected he heard the howl of the first amorous beast on his trail. He was startled by this and when a few moments later another soulful howl made the air tremble he became alarmed. The tree seemed a terrible way off and for it he fled for dear life, with the wolves in hot pursuit. Out of breath and half wild with fear he reached the tree and up he went. In his excitement he left his rifle on the ground. A few minutes later a half dozen wolves were snarling and yelping beneath and biting at the bark of the tree in the most ferocious manner.

The tenderfoot, being safe, recovered his composure after a little, but the wolves continued to snarl and fight under the tree. The man to pass away the time until Munford should come to his rescue, took a mouth organ from his pocket and began to play "Home, Sweet Home." As the strains floated out on the air the wolves stopped fighting. A look of astonishment came over each wolf's face. They swayed and stepped from side to side and then down they squatted on their haunches, up went their noses, and with one accord, they opened their mouths and howled as never before. No sooner did they get through with the first howl than they caught their breath and started in again. It was at this juncture that Munford arrived. The sight of a row of wolves sitting up as an audience to such a concert and encoring the star performer in such accents was too much for Munford and he rolled on the ground and laughed and shouted aloud. Thereupon the wolves clapped their tails between their legs and sneaked away through the brush, and the hunt was off for that day.—From the New York Sun.
